Do you see any issues with sharing this message with TIDA? Bob Beck has brought up a couple of times his concern re the SF Chron article.

Team, below is a response that we finalized through RASO and NAVSEA/NAVFAC PAOs regarding a query from CBS Bay Area about making a link from HPNS TtEC rad. falsification issues to other BRAC sites in the Bay Area.

Please feel free to share w your folks for future use should they receive a similar question from the public/media. Always send media queries to me unless you're at a RAB and feel a necessity to use the response.

You can start with the second sentence, or modify the first sentence to make it relevant to your sites.

R, Bill

Bay Area

Leslie, our response to your query dated 2 Feb. is below. Please attribute the statements to Ms. Kimberly Ostrowski, Base Realignment and Closure, Program Management Office, Director West. R, Bill

Q1: In light of the recent Navy decision to retest soil samples from areas at the former Hunter's Point Shipyard in SF, has the Navy evaluated or decided to retest soil samples from other Navy facilities in the Bay Area which were remediated or tested by the same company as at Hunter's Point?

A1: No, the Navy has not reevaluated or retested soil samples from Navy Base Realignment and Closure Sites in the Bay Area (BRAC Sites) with the exception of HPNS.

The falsified data at HPNS was discovered by the Navy during quality control/quality assurance (QA/QC) reviews by Navy radiological technical experts.

Processes for QA/QC are in place at all BRAC sites, including field oversight and data review of all contaminants by Navy personnel and the regulatory agencies to verify data is accurate and representative of site conditions.

The Navy works very closely with regulatory agencies during all phases of our environmental cleanup program, with public safety and environmental protection being paramount. The Navy's internal-review safeguards and the regulatory-review process indicate radiological data gathered is accurate and the work completed to date is protective of human health.

Hello,

I knew we had spoken before, I started to type your email and my system loaded you from memory!

In light of the recent Navy decision to retest soil samples from areas at the former Hunter's Point Shipyard in SF, has the Navy evaluated or decided to retest soil samples from other Navy facilities in the Bay Area which were remediated or tested by the same company as at Hunter's Point?

Thank you

Leslie Donaldson
